RE: Dismissal of Slayer Petition Against Nathan Carman

Statement of James Rosenberg, Ben Siracusa Hillman, and Cathy Green --
Shaheen & Gordon PA:

We are very pleased that Judge King issued this timely ruling dismissing the case against Nathan. His opinion is very thorough, well-reasoned and factually driven. This case should never have been brought in New Hampshire.

Nathan has firmly and adamantly denied that he murdered his grandfather. The death of his mother while they were fishing was a tragic accident. There is no celebrating, because Nathan has lost the two people in the world closest to him. His pain continues.

Nathan Carman makes the following statement:

I am pleased by the dismissal of the case on grounds of residency, because the Court got the facts right.

I want to be clear that the underlying allegations in my aunts' dismissed petition that I murdered my grandpa and/or my mom, are as false and meritless as my aunts' position on residency has been shown to be. In its order, the Honorable Court devoted two pages to quoting the transcript of Valerie Santilli's deposition taken in the Rhode Island insurance case, where she, with the assistance of counsel, strove to avoid telling the truth about my grandfather's residency. In its order, the Court also discussed my aunts' earlier attempts, through counsel, to mislead the Court by submitting incomplete deed records into evidence. In contrast, I submitted to two whole days of deposition testimony in this case at which I appeared without counsel and answered detailed questions from Attorney Small while under oath. I also appeared and spoke at numerous Court hearings, before funds were released to enable me to hire capable counsel. In all my statements to the Court and under oath, I told the whole truth. I believe my decision to take the high road in the firm belief that the facts would ultimately prevail contrasted favorably against the tactics employed by my aunts, helping to lead to the outcome of the case being dismissed that we see in the Court's order today.
